Relative Economics - The Concept

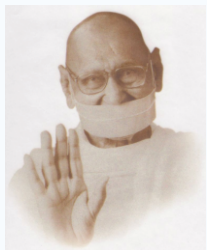

A new non-violent economic concept of 'Relative Economics' is based on the balanced development, change in education system keeping in mind the basic needs of one and all and the human values.

The present economic system has not achieved, to a great level, the solution to the current problems of the larger section of the society. A new dynamic economic order for a progressive, peaceful, stable and harmonious society is the present days need.

New model would ensure the fulfillment of human-being's basic materialistic needs and will save the society from conflicts, tensions and ecological im-balances.

A new system emphasis not only developing the knowledge of human being but human being itself. It also emphasis on better education, self employment, faster and better medical help.

Modern economics has failed to maintain the economic equilibrium in the society in opening the opportunities of rapid growth for human beings. On the contrary it has given rise to extreme inequality, poverty and hunger. This has further increased violence, extremism, frustration, terrorism and emotional imbalance.

Acharya Shri Mahapragya's endeavors for a better world has given a revolutionary concept in the field of economics in the form of Non-violence for individual empowerment and social transformation. In this concept every individual is expected to put a legitimate limit to his own consumption and desires.

Acharya Shri's inspiring thoughts have given the needed turn to our economic thinking. His efforts towards developing an alternative model of 'Relative Economics' is to have a society which is free from exploitation and inequality. Mankind may find peace, safety and security. This system would ensure the fulfillment of humanity's basic minimum needs. Activities like training to the people in self-employment would be absolutely essential in this context.

Relative Economics - The Need

Hunger & malnutrition

In current economic situation, larger section of the society are deprived of basic minimum needs like food, cloth and shelter.

Corruption, Crime & terrorism

Today we are living under threat, terrorism, economic instability and exploitation. Everywhere there is corruption.

• Poverty & unemployment

Current economic development is not balanced and inclusive, which has resulted in a lot of social problem like poverty and unemployment.

• Overpopulation

Population all over is more than available sustainable resources. Overpopulation leads to a diminished quality of life.

• Ecological Imbalance

Gases generating through industrial and vehicular pollution is affecting ozone layer of the earth. There is an urgent need for environmental protection.

• Over consumption & possession

Unlimited consumption and unlimited accumulation of wealth has created economic inequality in the society.

• Unlimited desires & exploitation

Our desires are unlimited which contributes to exploitation of poor people. We need to eradicate economic inequality, violence and poverty from the society.

• Fall in moral and ethical values

Today we are more inclined to materialism which what we need is to establish a new economic order which is not devoid of spirituality, morality and ethics. There is a need for compassion and morality in an individual in earning and utilizing money.

• Improper educational system

Current education system has many deficiencies. It is important to revise the current situation of the education system. Education which can bring out a good human being.
